BYRN RICH MEN, A WITNESS SAYS, CAN'S GET THE GENUINE

Creamery Products of the American Hog-Beniere Charge Wholesale Franc on the Retail Greeces-Proposing a 8500 Pounity. The annual legislative inquiry as to the state of the counterfeit butter trade in the metropolis was begun yesterday in the Morton House. Senators Low of Orange, Thomas of ommittee this winter. They are assisted by A. P. Thornton of Ogdensburg as professional Interlocutor. Several gentlemen representing the Quaker dairy interests along the bank of the Hudson below Spuyten Duyvil were present. C. H. Robison, who runs a lard creamery in Chicago, was the first witness. In reply to questions asked by Mr. Thornton he partly explained the method of making butter from swine. Mr. Robison said that leaf lard was run through a hasher, and then rendered at a temperature of about 140'. Next it was deised and cooled in ice water for from thirty-six hours to four or five days. Afterward it was drained off, melted, churned, and mixed with cream butter. The percentage of butter sed is from 20 to 50, ordinarily about 40. Mr. Robison said his firm makes about 400 tubs a day. There are fifty-six pounds in a tub. The duct is shipped to New York, Philadelphia. and Boston. He used to make suine, which is and Boston. He used to make suine, which is like butterine, except that there is a good deal of lard in it and very little butter. Some of the butterine has as little as 20 per cent, of butter, and the percentage of lard is 80. Two grades are shipped to the East—"first creamery" and "second creamery." Chairman Low inquired whether any other olls were used in making butterine.

Mr. Robison replied that the water in which the lard is cooled contains a preparation which he desired to keep to himself. Oils were also used in producing the desired color. Being pressed to tell what these unnamed substances are, the witness replied: "That is a question I don't want to answer."

used in producing the desired color. Being pressed to tell what these unnamed substances are, the witness repiled: "That is a question I don't want to answer."

Chairman Low-Then there are materials used which you do not wish to state?

Mr. Robison-Yes, sir.

The witness said he had never consulted a chemist as 17 whether these materials were injurious to health. With genuine butter at 35 cents a pound and lard at 10 s, the butterine cost the manufacturers about 20% cents a pound for the medium grade. This is sold to retailers here for from 25 to 26 cents a pound. Commission houses get 5 per cent for handling it. Mr. Robison was unable to say whether the retailers sold the stuff as butter or not.

Benjamin F. Van Volkenburgh, a commission merchant in this city, testified that the quantities of oleomargarine, butterine, and other substitutes for butter used here are increasing. In 1882 between 150,000 and 200,000 packages were manufactured or sent here. The figures for 1883 were between 250,000 and 300,000. This trade has nearly ruined the saile of the middle grades of butter. The proportions of oleomargarine and butterine sold are about half and half—the latter loading in the winter and the former in the summer. The retailers pay from 13 to 16 cents a pound for oleomargarine and from 24 to 25 cents for butterine. They retail oleomargarine or from 20 to 30 cents and butterine all the way from 39 to 40, and up to 45 cents a pound— all out of the same tub," said the witness. He had never seen any oleomargarine or butterine sold by retailers for what they really were. If they were sold thus, the sales would not be, in his orinion, more than five per cent. of what they are now. They are sale would not be, in his orinion, more than five per cent. of what they are now. They are sale would not be, in his orinion, more than five per cent. of what they are now. They are sale would not be, in his orinion, more than five per cent. of what they are now. They are sale would not be, in his orinion, more than five per cent. of stuff for butter. He had seen goods sold in this manner that he would swear were elected an anner that he would swear were elected. F. H. Stege, produce dealer in this city, said that, so far as his observation had gone, grocerymen generally buy a tub or two of butter, so as to have a little of the genuine article in the store, but give their customers oleomargarine or some other counterfeit when they call for butter. If these goods were sold for want they are the sale would fall off at least two-thirds. The witness would favor a fine of at least $500 for every violation of the faw, and if that didn't stop the sale of these counterfeits as butter, he would favor a law absolutely prohibiting their resoulatours. He would like to see a law enforced that would compel sellers of elected and printing their and butterine to sell them for what they are. If people want colored lard for table use he would let them have it.

James H. Seymour, formerly President of the Mercantile Exchange, a commission merchant, testified that, in his opinion, to per cent, of the butter sold at retail in this city, between Sept. I and April 1, is counterfeit, and about 98 per cent, of this counterfeit is sold for genuine butter. He believed the sale of the imitations would be reduced 75 per cent, if they were offered to consumers as imitations. He never saw any sold for what it was but once, and that was years ago. According to the withers is described to the similations.

He had purchased from Mr. Nathan oleomargarine that was branded Gilt-edge. The Gilt-edge was in large letters, and the oleomargarine brand was inconspicuous. The witness thought that dealing in these counterfeits was rather disreputable business.

Senator Themas—How long since you sold it? Witness—About two weeks.

Mr. Seymour added that more dealers went into the sale of those goods last fall than ever before. Now they are howling because, after they have worked up a trade amont the retailers, the manufacturers are stepping in and taking this trade away from them. He would like to see a law enforced that would compel dealers to soll these goods for just what they are. This would at first raise the price of genuine butter, which would encourage production, and soon the price of butter to consumers would be not much higher than that of the counterfeit is now. But at present they can't make butter from the five cow to compete with the dead hog preduct. If the sale of the counterfeits cannot be regulated in any other way, the witness would favor prohibition. The present law is a dead letter. In some houses of rich men they have no butter on the table, it is so difficult to get the genuine, the witness said.

W. H. B. Totten of this city, a dealer in produce, testified that on certain grades of genuine butter the price had been lowered 25 per cent, by the sale of the initiations. Grocerymen alt tell me one story, he said, that they can't sell the stuff unless they sell it as butter. He thought the fine for each violation of the law should be $500. He was inclined to favor the appointment of a State inspector, and thought one inspector would be be sufficient for New York city.

W. H. Duckworth, dealer in produce in this city, testilled that in his opinion haif the butter sold here between Nov. I and April 1 was counterfest. He remembered an instance of the convection of a retailer under the law. The growsyman paid his $5 fine and said: 'I will go back to the store and make that up selling oleomargarine. He tried the his Adventures in this City. A small lad accosted Louis Bensenger of 150 Nassau street as he was leaving the Tract Society office on Thursday evening, and asked for ten cents to get something to eat. Mr. Bensenger questioned the boy, and found that

He left l'ittsburgh Feb. 9 between two freight chrs, and journeyed to the Newark Meadows. He then walked to Marion, boarded a passenger ear, and a tieket taker nassed him over the Destrosses Street Ferry. He asked permission off a traveller to carry his vallee, and received a quarter for that.

With this money he began selling papers on Feb. 11. He worked industriously until Thursday, when some extravagances bankrupted him. He met a boy who teld him to ask a dime of the first man he met. MARRIED HER TO SAVE HER LIFE. Kindberg's Uncompromising Answer to his Wife's Sait for Divorce.

Judge Donohue reserved his decision yesterday upon a motion for temporary alimony made on behalf of Eleanor R. Kindberg in her suit for a limited divorce from Edward A. Kind-berg. They were married in July last. He had disgraced her, she says, under promise of mar-riage, three years ago. Before the marriage urgent solicitation, she signed a paper stating that he married her only to ease her conscien and save her life. On the day of the marriage he introduced her to his mother.

Three weeks ago, she says, a companion of her husband named Molineux called at her her husband named Molineux called at her room in East Thirtieth street, where she made a living by sewing. He remained until 10 o'clock in the evening. After his departure she retired, and as few moments later her husband, with four men, broke into the room, and, using violent and insulting language, compelled her to sign a paper.

Kindberg says he first met his wife at a restaurant where she was waitress; that he never promised to marry her until the day of the marriage, and he did go then out of charity because she harassed and slarmed him with threats of suicide. She made a solemn promise never to ask for support or maintenance, saying she only wanted to bear the name of being a married woman, as it was only in that way her family would recognize her. He denies that she lives by her needle, and says that she spends her nights at balls and parties, and most of the days in bed. He admits having broken into her room on the occasion referred to, and the next day he began a suit for an absolute divorce, implicating Molineux with her.

TWENTY YEARS IN STATE PRISON.

Thomas Parter's Coming Sejeurn in Sing Sing for the Benefit of Society.

Mrs. Jessie Waldron of 216 East Thirtieth street was aroused from sleep on the night of Jan. 30 by a noise in her bedroom. She saw two men standing at her bedside. One pointed a cocked revolver at her head and threatened to kill her if she made any noise. Two other men robbed the bureau drawers of a diamond cross, valued at $300, and other jewelry. Then they left the house, threatening to return and kill Mrs. Waldron if she made any outery. Three days later Mrs. Waldron saw the mu

Three days later Mrs. Waldron saw the man who held the pistol to her head on the steps of the Thirty-third street elevated railroad station, and had him arrested. He was Thomas Porter, an ex-convict. He was tried in the General Sessions upon an indictment charging him with burgiary, and convicted. He was arraigned yesterday for sentence.

"Forter," said Judgo Cowing, "you appear to be a hardened criminal. I am informed that you have spent half of your life, though you are only thirty-two years old, in State prison, and that there are five untried indictments against you, under which, upon conviction, you might be sentenced to State prison for a lifetime. You are a sworn enemy of society, it seems, and you ought to be put where you cannot prey upon society for some years. The sentence of the Court is that you be imprisoned in State prison at hard labor for twenty years—the extreme penalty of the law."

Forter turned unconcernedly from the bar. The indictments that Judge Cowing referred to are five indictments for felonious assault that have been pigeonholed in the District Attorney's office.

THEY ARRESTED EACH OTHER. A Hilarious Young Man Collars a Police

Policeman Albertson of the Thirtieth street station was called into the saloon at 22 East Seventeenth street yesterday afternoon, He found a well-dressed young man who had taken many stimulants and was too noisy.

The policeman coaxed the young man into the street and advised him to go home. The young man wished to argue the matter and became rather quarrelsome. The policeman walked away from him, and the young man foliawed the policeman for several blocks.

Finally the policeman nut his hand on the young man's shoulder and said. "Ill have to take you in." The young man grasped the policeman's shoulder and said:

"I thie think not, sir. I'm a policeman mysolf, sir. I'll thie take you in, sir."

Then the young man and the policeman took each other to the police station. Policeman Albertson held the young man up, while the young man told Capt. Williams that he had arrested Albertson for disorderly conduct. Capt. Williams, for some reason, did not recognize the young man's authority.

John Brad, who said that he steeped in on his way to a wrestling match, and John Dawson, who went in to write a description of the place for publication, were released.

DISCUSSING MOTHERS-IN-LAW. Custom House Clerk Campbell Brenks Clerk

Burke's Nose $200 Worth.

John U. Burke, a Custom House clerk, sued a fellow clerk named Nicholas L. Campbell in the Court of Common Pleas for damages for an assault. On the trial yesterday, before Judge J. F. Daly and a jury, Burke testified that on J. F. Daly and a jury. Burke testified that on April 19, 1882, while he was at his desk, Campbell and others came in and engaged in a discussion about mothers-in-law. One of the number said that Burke did not seem pleased with a story which had just been related, and he replied that he was not pleased. Campbell suggested that Burke had better come out into the corridor. Then Campbell planted his lat upon the bridge of Burke's nose, breaking it. Campbell testified yesterday that he was irritated beyond forbearance, and that if he had not been held back he "would have got in another lick."

The jury gave Burke a verdict for $200.

Justice Done Up in an Overconf. Recorder Smyth sat upon the bench of the closely buttoned overcost. The jurous shivered in a closely buttoned overcoat. The jurors shivered in their overcoats. The stenographers fingers were tumb. There was an arctic chill in the atmosphere. A deadly draught poured in through the cravices of the big, ratting windows.

"The Judges of time court," said Recorder Smyth, "are about tired of asking the so called Bureau of Repairs of the Department of Public Works to make this court room habitable. The draught from the windows is strong enough to kill any one who is not very warmly wrapped."

A court officer showed where the window asshes were separated from the rotten window casing by several gaping inches, through which a stream of hir poured.

He Won't Commit Suicide Again. Stephen O'Reilly, otherwise known as Seddone's Mouse, was arraigned yesterday at the bar of the deneral Sessions. He was told that the Grand Jury had dismissed the complaint that he had attempted to cominit suicide by hanging himself in a ceil in the Morcer struct police ristion. Recorder Smyth discharged O'Reity. He darted toward the door. Detective Sergenits Mangin and Magnine were standing in his way. "Get out of my way, Sergeant, he said to Kergeant Magnire." Let me set out of this. They've let me go. Ain't I lucky! You bet your life, Sergeant, I'll never commit suicide again."

They gave chase and fired at the men, to induce them to stop, but the more they fired the faster the yawi went. It reached the foot of Coriears street far ahead of the police boat, and the men who were in it, after fastening it to a convenient schooner, sprang sahores and ran away.
